LICENS'D, July 1. 1691. J. F.

ONE Consbruk, Commissary-General in the City of Mentz, having kept a secret Correspondency with the French King, in order to betray that City into his hands, the Plot was discovered in this following manner :

The French sent a Trumpeter into the City of Mentz, under pretence to ransom some Prisoners of War, but in effect to deliver secretly some Letters to the Commissary-General. The Trumpeter staying at the said place somewhat longer than was expected, the French General was very uneasy about it, and sent the Marquess de Villacart, Maistre de Camp of the Regiment of Horse of Berry, Commander of the Carabines, and Nephew to Monsieur de Louvois, together with Monsieur Belleviere, Major of the Royal Regiment of Horse, and Mr. Fellinier, Captain of a Troop of Horse, towards the City, to try if they could hear any news of the said Trumpeter; but unluckily for them, they were all made Prisoners by a Troop of Dragoons, who being sent by the Governor to go in pursuit of a French Party, met these three abovementioned Officers on their return. At the Entrance of the Gate of the City they met the Trumpeter; and one of the Officers that was taken, told him in a great passion, That he was the cause of their being made Prisoners; and that they would not fail to get him to be hang'd, as soon as they were set at liberty. The Trumpeter did not like the Proposals; and being besides, a German, he thought it safest for him to return into the City; and going straight to the Governor, acquainted him with what had past. General Count Thungen, the Governor of the City, being extremely surprized at it, sent immediately for the Commissary-General, and asking him about the Letter, and the Commissary denying that ever he had received one, the Governor sent for Six Hussares, who after having stript him of all his Cloathes to his very shirt, in the General's presence, several Letters of dangerous concern were found about him, hidden in some secret places of his Body. It was plainly discovered by them, that he had betrayed to the French King all the Measures that were taken in the City; and that he was to set the City on fire, as soon as the French were come near to Bombard it. There was a Letter found about him, writ by the French King's own hand; and another written by him to the French King; wherein he thanks him for the exact and regular payment of his Pension, which has been Two hundred French Pistoles a Month: He tells him, that a great many are ready to assist him in all his undertakings for the French King's service; and it is said, he will in few days be put to the Rack, in order to discover the said Traytors. He himself is put into Iron Chains and an Express is sent to seize his Brother, who is Secretary to the Emperor; his own Secretary, who was secured with his Master, has since Poison'd himself in the Prison. The Governor-General, Count Thungen, has ordered all his Goods to be seized at Costheim, where the said Commissary did reside; amongst which, there was found a Trunk full of French Money, and a Silver Service. If this dangerous Conspiracy had not been so opportunely discovered, the City of Mentz, the taking of which cost the Duke of Lorain so much pains, and the Germans so much Blood, had been now all in Ashes. The French have sent a Trumpeter into the City, to let the Governor know, That in case he did not surrender the three Officers, they would destroy the City. But the Governor has answered them, That upon the throwing of the first Bomb into the City, he would immediately Hang the said three Officers upon the Rampart.
